THE MILL AND THE MAYOR OF DAPTO

DAPTO

Did you know Dapto was once called Brownsville? This was after the town's unofficial mayor, George Brown, the owner of the Ship Inn in the early 1830s. He also built a windmill, where he would grind anyone's grain for a fee. Later George upgraded to a steam mill - the scene of a bizarre party in 1844 when he invited gentlemen of Illawarra "to witness the experiment of steaming down a bullock". The result of this strange event was recorded as 309 pounds of tallow, followed by champagne and speeches. George died in 1850, by which time the town had grown around his mill and pub. No bull.
